CHAPTER XXIX.

Means To An End.

Kitty, left alone once more, found herself in better heart than she had been but now. At least, she had seen Roleau—had found once more proof of his faithfulness and his efficiency. Surely he would help her to escape yet again. And as for Sachio—better he, of whom she knew something, than a stranger of whom she knew nothing at all. Of late despair had been knocking at her heart in such fashion that the summons of opportunity found no hearing, but now she began to plan once more.

She sought to study the exits of the agartm n. in which she found herself. There were two doors, so it seemed, both fastented. She pushed strongly at both fastened. She pushed strongly at one; it opened before ner. She stood once more face to face with Count Bachio, the mocking conspirator who had of late had so much to do with her own misfortunes!

'Madamoiselle!" sald he, "I am se

"For myself," rejoined Kitty indig-nantly, "I was never so much displeased as I am now. So the gentlemen of this country in this way show their quality —in their treatment of women? I com-

There would be process of law, observance of the law. Is the habeas corpus writ a thing unknown in this country—have the people never yet wrung that right from the hands of tyrants? In my country there are some recourses which any citizen may have."

"Your own country? Why did you ever leave it, mademoiselle?"

"The ressons concern me alone, sir."

"The reasons concern me alone, sir."
"Indeed, you mistake—they do not concern you alone. We are many of us in this country also concerned with them. We would that you never had come from America. There are many reasons moving to that. And, indeed, the state of the country also come. even ask your return to your own

"So! And you cannot take such good advice?"

"No. I will not. To deceive to pre-

'No. I will not. To deceive, to pretend, to counterfeit—those are attrib-utes of your kingdom, not of my own country, America. In my country we have better standards-men and women bave better standards—men and women alike—for which I heartily am glad."
"You have a stinging tongue, mademoiselle," said Count Sachio, red under his swarthy skin. "Perhaps it will grow milder if left unused. I shall leave you here—until you are willing to say you are done with Gretzhoffen and ready to return to your own country. This land, mademoiselle, can keep its own secrets—it could even close over the secret of the disappearance of a own secrets—it could even close over the secret of the disappearance of a young woman—and leave her fate a mystery. I trust that you will reconsider what you have said." A moment and he had left her once more. Before he passed through the door she glanced beyond. The room was occupied, apparently, by his friends—escape on that side was impossible. The other door still remained fastened. Kitty turned to it with burglarlous intent—using an art learned when she was a schoolgirl. With no better instrument than a hairpin, she had seen wonders than a hairpin, she had seen wonders

Her brisk interchange of compliments with Count Sachio had set her pulses stirring once more. She wanted to get garm, throughout South Daktota. The she wanted to escape, and she pro- unusually cool summer is blamed.

Leaves Whole Fortune To Adopted Daughter

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 10.-Fifteen years ago, Alice Glensk, pretty, and twenty-two, was left in Scotland with her three sisters and her mother, widowed when her father died while acting as a missionary in Congo Free State. The girl worked with her mother and sisters in the woolen mills, later being adopted by a Minneapolis couple, and fortune of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Schmerier, who had adopted her. "She was as a daughter to us," read their wills.
